

From 23-28 September 2007, the second international advanced course on “Public Communication and Applied Ethics of Nanotechnology” will take place in St Edmund Hall in Oxford (UK).

This intensive course consists of an alternating program of expert lectures, case studies, exercises, role play, group discussions and debate and aims at the active participation of all those attending.

The course is for all those working in nanotechnology with an interest in its public communication and ethical implication.

For more information you can click here or visit the Nanobio-RAISE website:
www.nanobio-raise.org